

Protect Your Paycheck: The Asset You Rely On Most

Your income isn't just a number— it's the foundation that supports your home, your family's meals, and your future retirement.

If an illness or injury took your paycheck away tomorrow, would your financial plans stay on track?

The Odds are Higher Than You Think

Disability isn't just about freak accidents; it is most often caused by common medical conditions like back pain, heart issues, or cancer.

1 in 4: 20-year-olds who will become disabled before age 65.

72%: The percentage of employees living paycheck to paycheck.

Illness vs. Injury: Most claims are for illnesses like musculoskeletal disorders (26%) or nervous system issues (20%), while injuries only account for 10%.

Why Your "Work Coverage" Isn't Enough

Group Long-Term Disability can provide a foundation but can also have significant structural gaps.

The 60% Cap: Most work plans only cover 60% of your base salary.

Bonus Blindness: Incentives, commissions, and bonuses are typically excluded from coverage.

The Tax Hit: Benefits from work plans are usually fully taxable, significantly reducing your actual take-home pay.

Not Portable: If you change jobs or careers, you usually leave your protection behind.

Small Cost, Massive Protection

Protecting your paycheck is surprisingly affordable.

The 1–3% Rule: An income protection plan typically costs only 1% to 3% of what you earn.
